Open to all sophomores, juniors, seniors and graduate students. Journalism experience is strongly encouraged.

USC Annenberg will partner with LA Taco to expose students to journalism surrounding the diverse themes of food, art and culture in the colorful and vibrant city of Tijuana, Mexico. This location will allow students to explore an important cultural, political and economic southern neighbor that significantly impacts the U.S. in many ways. Opportunities available to students include visiting local Mexican communities to examine how food affects family, culture and day-to-day life. Stories may include the intersection of food and poverty, food and business, food and the environment, food and migrants/refugees, food and celebration, food and art and more.
