Broadcast Journalism Course Descriptions and Career Recommendations

JOUR 402 Advanced Television Reporting

The class will focus on writing and reporting well-balanced, comprehensive and visually compelling video journalism stories. Undergraduate and graduate students research, report, write, shoot and edit video stories for broadcast, web and social platforms. During TV day-of-air shifts in the Annenberg Media Center, students learn how to meet the same deadlines that professional reporters handle in small, medium and large markets. They also put together feature packages and could get the chance to do live shots for the nightly newscasts.

This class is a MUST for any student who wants to be a TV reporter in news, sports or entertainment. It is also strongly recommended for students who want to learn how to field produce packages.

JOUR 403 Television News Production

Students sharpen news judgment, writing, communication, and leadership skills by producing live day-of-air television newscasts and creating digital content. They make editorial and formatting decisions about news coverage, stories, and presentation while managing reporters, anchors, writers, editors and many others under deadline pressure. JOUR 403 producers will propose, coordinate and supervise live shots. Students have used skills learned in JOUR 403 to excel in jobs including news producing, news reporting, sports producing and network segment producing.

This class is a MUST for students who want to be a TV or digital producer in news, sports or entertainment.

JOUR 405 Non-Fiction Television

This class introduces students to the process of producing a documentary, using techniques that can be applied to digital and broadcast platforms. Students produce a long form story (10-15 minutes) that is a result of in-depth reporting. During the semester, students research and pitch story ideas, learn to use advanced camera technology, shoot their stories, learn to write a long-form script, learn advanced editing techniques, and then edit their projects. Stories from JOUR 405 are eligible to be published on Impact, the award-winning newsmagazine and documentary series produced by Annenberg students.

This course is a MUST for anyone who wants to do magazine format or documentary production.

JOUR 409 Radio Storytelling and Podcasts

Learn techniques for audio journalism, an increasingly popular and growing field. This course covers the effective use of sound, the art of the interview, writing for the ear, digital audio editing, vocal delivery and how to craft stories that people want to listen to. Students must do four radio day-of-air shifts over the course of the semester for Annenberg Radio. They will also produce features, including non-narrated and non-traditional, and learn about the expanding world of podcasting.

This course is a MUST for anyone who wants to work in public or commercial radio or podcasting.
